| Journalism | 79 B+ |

The Vancouver Summer Program is an intensive four-week program giving participants the opportunity to gain knowledge of culture and practices in Canada. The courses offered: Culture and Communication (Anthropology) and Global Journalism (Journalism), consisted of 39 contact hours per course, were taught by UBC faculty, and were evaluated by method of exams, assignments, papers and participation.

As students participating in the summer program do not go through the formal UBC admission process there is no official UBC transcript available. However, the home university may wish to grant credit and for reference, each course would be 3 credits.

Sincerely,
